

Beijing: Chinese tech companies appear to censor Uyghur and Tibetan by removing their languages from study courses as well as banning comments in them from their websites. Public concerns about tech-enabled suppression of ethnic minorities have deepened, reported Protocol. As per Talkmate, a language-learning app that partners with UNESCO, posted via its official Weibo account that it had "temporarily" taken down Tibetan and Uyghur language classes "due to government policies." This announcement was posted last Friday but appears to have been removed. The app, which appears to champion linguistic diversity, offers courses in nearly 100 languages, from Urdu and Montenegrin to Creole and Slovak, reported Protocol.

Taiwan rejects Beijing's 'one China' principle

AGENCIES / Taipei

Taiwan on Thursday slammed Beijing for its 'interference' in the internal matters of the democratic island after the Chinese Communist Party said that Taiwan's participation in Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) activities must be based on the 'one China' principle.

"China's false statements have severely undermined the spirit of APEC," the Taiwan Ministry of Foreign Affairs said adding that China should stop "improper political operations" and interference with Taiwan's participation in APEC-related meetings.

The developments came a day after Beijing's Taiwan Affairs Office spokesperson, Zhu

Fenglian said that the "Taiwan region's" participation in APEC activities must be based on the "one China" principle, Taiwan News reported. "Since Taiwan joined APEC in 1991, it has participated in the economic and trade forum as a full member," the Taiwan Ministry of Foreign Affairs (MOFA) said in a statement.

"Taiwan enjoys the same status and has the same obligations as all members. There is no 'one China' principle in the agreement allowing Taiwan's participation in APEC," MOFA was quoted as saying by Taiwan News.

The ministry also said that it rejects China's attempts to distort historical facts and demand acceptance of the "one China" principle to "create the illusion" that Taiwan is subordinate to China.

Taiwan is not a part of China and that the Chinese Communist Party has never ruled Taiwan for even one day. China has no right to represent Taiwanese on the international stage or anywhere else, Taiwan News reported citing MOFA.

"Only Taiwan's democratically elected government has the right to represent the 23.5 million Taiwanese," MOFA said.

This came as Beijing claims sovereignty over the democratic island and has increased military incursions in Taiwan. Taiwan is a democracy of almost 24 million people located off the southeastern coast of mainland China.

Despite being governed separately for more than seven decades, China has threatened that "Taiwan's independence" means war.

Meghan apologises for misleading court

The Duchess of Sussex, Meghan Markle, has apologised to a UK court after admitting being involved in a biography of her short tenure as a royal in Britain, despite having previously denied it. The apology came as part of a British newspaper group's appeal against a High Court ruling that it breached the Duchess of Sussex's privacy, by publishing parts of a letter she wrote to her father.

For many villages, Taliban take over is a sigh of relief

AGENCIES — Kabul

The Taliban takeover in Afghanistan has brought with it a different set of rules and way of life for its locals, which is being questioned and criticized globally. The headline history of the previous Taliban rule, rights to women, basic rights to the citizens and utilization of Afghan soil for terrorism, are some of the many points of serious concern, that have stopped any country from officially recognizing the Taliban rule.

While the Taliban rule in Afghanistan has shrouded the future of the country's citizens; the new rule has come as a sigh of relief and a hope of life for hundreds of villagers, who have witnessed the brunt of air strikes, gun battles and funerals.

The Taliban takeover, for these villagers, particularly from the urban middle class, has been rejoiced as it brings with it, an end to the ongoing airstrikes and gun battles, making their villages as a frontline fighting point in the past.

In Dastan, a remote farming village, situated in the north of Balkh province, residents have not seen international aids, workers or dignitaries coming to their help. However, the village has certainly seen gun battles, air strikes, corruption and loss of lives of their loved ones. For them, Taliban takeover will end the fighting, loss of lives of their family members and corruption.

"I would give everything to the Taliban," said Maky, an elderly resident of Das-

Taliban."

Another elderly resident of the village, Hajifat Khan, celebrates the Taliban victory by putting colourful flags and trinkets on the graves of the Taliban fighters, who died fighting from Dastan in the past.

"The men and women of this village are Taliban supporters, young and old. Now, Im satisfied. Now there are no infidels," he said adding that Dastan used to be a thriving community, but shrunk due to relocation of may families, who suffered to fighting and poverty.

Hajifat said that many families of his village and many others lost their loved ones, young and old in attacks by the Taliban insurgents and air strikes by US-led forces, whose target would rarely be in major cities and would primarily be focused on rural areas.

FORCED LABOUR: Lawsuit against Hindu body in US

AGENCIES / New York

A prominent Hindu organisation is facing new allegations in an updated lawsuit that it lured labourers from India and forced hundreds of workers to work for low wages at its temple sites across the United States. In May this year, a group of Indian workers had filed a lawsuit in US District Court alleging violations of human trafficking and wage law against Bochasanwasi Akshar Purushottam Swaminyarayan Sanstha (BAPS), saying they were confined and forced to work for about USD 1 on constructing the massive Swaminyarayan temple in New Jersey.

The New York Times said in a report on Wednesday that in the lawsuit filed in New Jersey federal court and amended last month, BAPS has been accused "of luring labourers from India to work on temples near Atlanta, Chicago, Houston and Los Angeles, as well as in Robbinsville, New Jersey, paying them just USD 450 a month."
